ALL-DAY JAM AT UNION STATION

Crowds Yesterday Exceeded All Records for Fourth.

Union Station was stormed by travelers yesterday. The morning and evening rush, the incoming and outgoing contingent, exceeded all records, so the station officials say. Hundreds were turned away, unable to catch their trains in the morning because they could not get their tickets in time. The ticket sellers were unable to hand out the tickets fast enough to the struggling buyers. It was a case of "first come, first served," and the weaker and tardy ones were not served at all until long after their trains had pulled out. Though heavy business is always looked for at this holiday time, the fact that a triple holiday existed largely increased the number of tourists who, having three days to themselves, wanted to profit by it by leaving the city for a vacation Monday's incoming trains will doubtless carry heavy loads as a result. Usually on the Fourth of July many travelers who leave carry baskets and fishing tackle, expecting to return the same night. Yesterday it was different. Most of them carried telescopes or valises, indicating that their stay was to last several days. The trolley lines also cared for many of those who in the past relied on steam railroads to carry them to places more than ten miles distant. Yet, with all the electric competition, it was evident that the tide of steam travelers was extremely the tide of steam travelers was extremely heavy.

It should be borne in mind that on holidays the cars are always taxed beyond their capacity, and the number of passengers usually carried in cars was far exceeded yesterday of necessity. Half rates were granted on all railroads within a radius of 20 miles of St. Louis, and this concession was taken advantage of by many on the night of July 3 in leaving and arriving.

As indicating the extent of the business done by the railroads the number of cars of the different roads brought into Union Station in the morning tell the story statistically as follows: Morning arrivals—Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, 6 cars; St. Louis, Keokuk and Northwestern, 28 cars; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 14 cars; Chi-

Old Boat Which Had Apparently Been Used by the Victims May Have Been Set Adrift With a Purpose-Oar Locks Found Tied Under Seat Indicate That the Vessel Had Not Been Occupied on the Night of the Tragedy.

MRS. CLARENCE FOSTER.

They will figure prominently in the mysterious case which is now agitating the East.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Good Ground, L. I., July 4.-What is considered the most important evidence in establishing the charge that Louis Disbrow was responsible for the death of Charence Foster and Sarah Lawrence, in Tiana Bay, was brought to light here to-day. It has started the town talking about the case with renewed vigor, and every one is waiting to hear the facts in detail related at the preliminary examination, when it is resurred here before Magnitude Foster new. resumed here before Magistrate Foster next

This new evidence, District Attorney Smith and Detective Field believe, proves beyond question that Disbrow, Foster and Sarah Lawrence went out on the Tiana Bay in the same boat. Even the suicile theory is exploded in the face of this evidence.

SMALL, LEAKY BOAT

WAS NOT OCCUPIED. It will be proved by three witnesses that the small, lenky boat, in which, at first, it was supposed that Foster and the girl had taken their fatal trip, was not occupied by any one on the night of the drowning. This will be established by the finding of the iron oar locks, strung on a rope and tied to a seat in the boat when it was found on the beach the next morning in precisely the same condition as when the oat was tied to the dock the night before. This shows that the boat must have been sent adrift by some one during the night, and the theory is that it was done by Dis-

When the alarm was given along Tana Bay on the morning of June 10 that Clar-ence Foster and Sarah Lawrence were missing, one of the first things noticed was the disappearance of a small boat from the landing near the Ternell Hotel. The boat was an old one, with holes in the bottom and sides, was barely large enough to carry two persons comfortably, and, as was shown by tests, would fill and sink with two persons in it before going 200 yards from the shore.

For about two weeks prior to the tragedy this boat had been used by a lad named John Carter, who was employed in the building of a small dock, extending out

On the following day the leaky boat was found on the opposite side of the bay by two boys. They were Henry Jacobs and Doward Croker. LAST SEEN ALIVE IN COMPANY WITH DISBROW.

LAST SEEN ALIVE IN COMPANY WITH DISBROW.

Fester and Miss Lawrence were last seen alive in company with Disbrow on Monday night. Tuesday Disbrow disappeared and the same day the boat was found. On Saturday the bodies of Foster and Miss Lawrence were found in the bay near the Ternell House. With the finding of the bodies more careful attention was given to the meaning of the bodies more careful attention was given to the meaning of the bodies more careful attention was given to the meaning of the small boat from its moorings, and the recovery of it by Croker and Jacobs on the other side of the bay.

An investigation was made and it was soon discovered that a second and much intent, a boat owned by Frederick Squirer. This boat easily carries four or five persons. Tracks of a woman and men were found about the spot where the boat had been tied the night before, and tracks of one man were found leading away from the spot where the boat was found tied the next morning. The shoes of Louis Disbrow fitted those tracks, and the tracks led to a path that went directly to Ternell's Hotel.

With this discovery an investigation of the disappearance of the small boat was begun. If the three went out in the second boat, the large one, it was easy to understand how a fight might have occurred in the boat, following the quarrel in the hotel and the fight on the beach, and from the tracks it was easy to see how Disbrow might have brought back the large boat and then sent the small boat adrift as a blind.

TIED THE OAR LOCKS

UNDER THE SEAT. It was also revealed that when John Carter fied the small boat to the wharf on Monday night he strung the oar locks on from the Terneil Hotel landing. He used it to go out to a snagboat, which he kept anchored in the bay about 250 yards from the beach.

He knew it leaked and was unsafe for any considerable distance from the shore, and it has been shown that Charence Poster knew the condition of the boat, as he knew every beat, large or small, on the bay. But on the morning after the couple disappeared this boat was missing, and as tracks were found near where the boat had been tied the night before it was assumed been tied the night before it was assumed a role of the seats, as he had always done. To prevent any one from taking the boat away during the night he slipped the locks beneath the soat, so that they could not be seen.

Soon after the boat was found a detective arrived, and it was known that John Carter, thenry Jacobs and young Croker were being given a great deal of attention by the detective. To-day the whole story was Henry Jacobs and young Croker were being given a great deal of attention by the detective. To-day the whole story was learned.

When the boat was found by Jacobs and Croker the our locks were still tied under the scat. John Carter was sent for and positively identified not alone the locks and the rope with which they were tied, but the knot tied in the rope.

"I always tied the rope in the same way," he said, "and there is no possibility that I could be mistaken about it."

The uncovering of this evidence explains why District Attorney Smith and Detective Field have all along appeared so confident that they would prove that the three were out in the same boat. The oars belonging to the larger boat are of hardwood and have sharp edges. They are about five feet in length, and from tests made in the boat it is seen how easy it would have been for a man sitting in the center of the boat to have inflicted the would found over Frecter's right eye by a swinging blow of the one, or by a straight jab, it will be contended by the District Attorney that Foster and Dimples were sitting side by side in the stern seat, and that Disbrow was in the center seat with the cars.

The finding of the oarlocks, the District Attorney believes, supplies the necessary link in the evidence, making a very strong case against Disbrow. All along it has been a matter of common conclusion that if the prosecution could show that the three persons were in the same boat that night and that the leaky, small boat was not occupied, it would be very difficult for Disbrow to escape conviction. With the proof of motive, which will be made much stronger when Mr. Ternell tells what he knows about the occurrences in the botol, with Miss Pearsall's and Walton's similar stories of the fight on the beach, with the proof of the scar on Foster's head and Disbrow's linnocense. elieved here to-night that Attorney Miles Disbrow's innocense.

The people of Good Ground believe that there is now something which must have a very clear explanation if Disbrow's capes conviction.

Miss Burditt Dillard Accidentally Wounds Fred Lovell at Creve Cogur Lake.

Miss Burdette Dillard of No. 1128 Leonard avenue while shooting at a target at Creve Coeur Lake yesterday afternoon accidentally shot Fred Lovell of No. 100 Papin street in the back of the head, inflicting a wound which it is feared will prove fatal. Lovell is a trunkmaker, 12 years old, and lived with his mother.

Miss Dillard and a party of friends spent the day at the lake. She took with her a 22-caliber rifle, which they used to shoot at a target which was placed on a telegraph pole near the terminus of the street car tracks. At the point where they were they could not be seen by the party shooting at the target.

Lovell, with his brother and his brother's wife, was on a car passing through this cut on the way to the lake when Miss Dillard fired. The bullet missed the target and struck Levell in the back of the head, about an inch from the left ear. He feil back in his rent unconscious. Doctor Har-ris, who was at the lake, volunteered his services, but a glance at the wound con-vinced him of its seriousness. He ordered Lovell removed to the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium at Taylor avenue and the Suburban tracks.

When he reached the sanitarium vitality was so low that a salution of salt-water was injected into the brain. It was decided that his condition was too critical to undergo an operation, and so it was deferred. Lovell's brother kept vigit over his cot last night.
